Individual Assessment

This assessment is based on the responses given in the Extended DISC® Individual Assessment Questionnaire. This assessment should not be the sole criterion for making decisions about oneself. The purpose of this assessment is to provide supporting information for the respondent in self-development.

Introduction to Your Assessment

Ethan, you have undoubtedly realized that your success is determined in a very large part by how well you interact with other people. Your ability to effectively relate, communicate, influence and motivate others is a crucial skill in succeeding in your profession and creating successful, long-term relationships with customers, prospects, colleagues, subordinates, managers, friends and family members.

You have probably noticed it is very easy to get along with certain people. You almost instantly and effortlessly understand the other person. The communication just flows. It is a lot more than just mutual understanding of what is being said. It is as if the person sees you and the rest of the world in very similar terms. When it happens, everything is easier. Think about the last time it happened. Wasn't it effortless and uncomplicated?

Unfortunately, with most people interactions take more effort. They do not flow as easily. You cannot quite understand where the other person is coming from, what they really want, and what their intentions are. You may also have an uncomfortable feeling the other person is experiencing the same. You know the outcomes of the interaction are not quite what you want. You are likely to feel disappointed, frustrated and even tired. It takes energy, effort and concentration. Still, the results are not what you hoped they would be.

In these situations you probably feel there is something you could do, but are not quite sure what that is. You know your end goal – your destination – but are not sure how to get there. It is like being lost without a map.

Ethan, this Extended DISC® Individual Assessment will provide you with the map to more successful interactions with others. You will learn:

1. The four main human behavioral styles.
2. Who you are and how others perceive you.
3. How to read other people and better understand them.
4. How to adjust your communication style to achieve your goals.

Very Brief Background of the Extended DISC® Model

The Extended DISC® System is based on behavioral theories that have been used for over 90 years. The power of this model is that it is easy to learn, understand, and use because it identifies only four behavioral styles of individuals.

People can be divided in four main styles by identifying if they are more:

1. People- or Task-oriented.
2. Reserved or Active.

The resulting four styles are called:

D-style (Dominance)

I-style (Influence)

S-style (Steadiness)

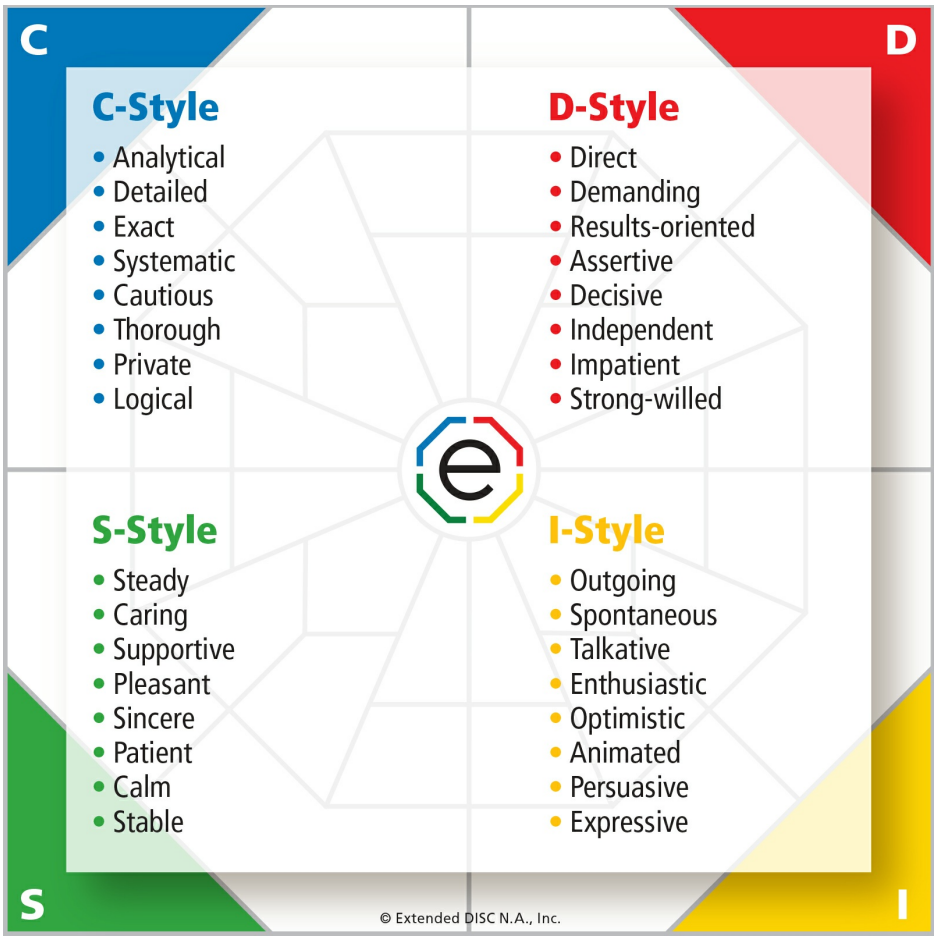

C-style (Conscientiousness)

The DISC Behavioral Styles - The Key points:

In the following pages you will learn about the four DISC-styles. As you get comfortable with their own unique traits and tendencies, please keep the following important points in mind:

- None of the styles are better or worse.
- All styles have strengths and development areas. They just happen to be different.
- Your style does not limit what you can accomplish or how successful you can be. It simply predicts how you tend to do things.
- You can find all of the four styles represented by very successful people. However, the most successful people know who they are. They modify their style appropriately with different styles of people and in different situations.

Your Extended DISC® Profiles

The Profiles are a visual representation of your behavioral style. They are based on your responses to the questionnaire. There are no right or wrong answers.

Profile I: Perceived Need to Adjust- Your adjusted style reflects an adjustment that you perceive would help you be successful in your current environment.

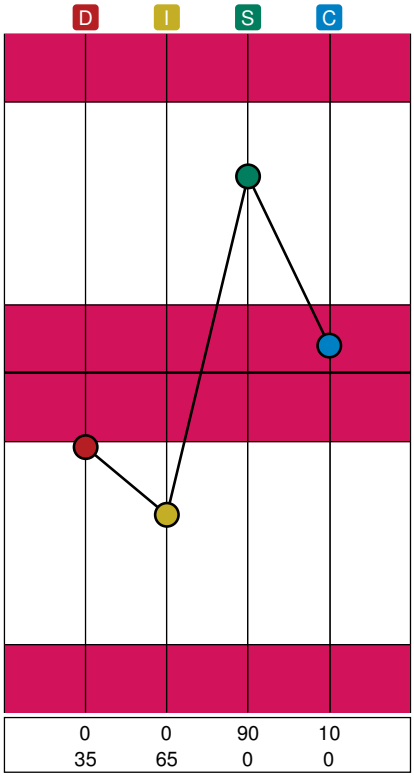

Profile II: Natural Style - Your natural style remains fairly stable, but not rigid, over your adult life. It is the style that is most comfortable to you and uses the least energy. Most individuals are a combination of styles.

The styles (D, I, S, and C) that are above the middle line (=top half of the Profile II) are your natural styles. The styles that show below the middle line means that they require more energy from you.

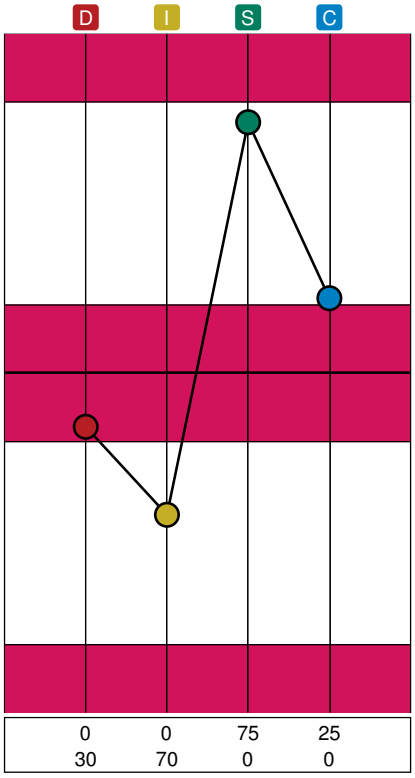

There are no good or bad behavioral styles - just different ones.

Your Profile I and II

Profile I - Perceived Need to Adjust

Profile II - Natural Style

Your DISC style is: SC (S - 75%, C - 25%)

Your DISC Style

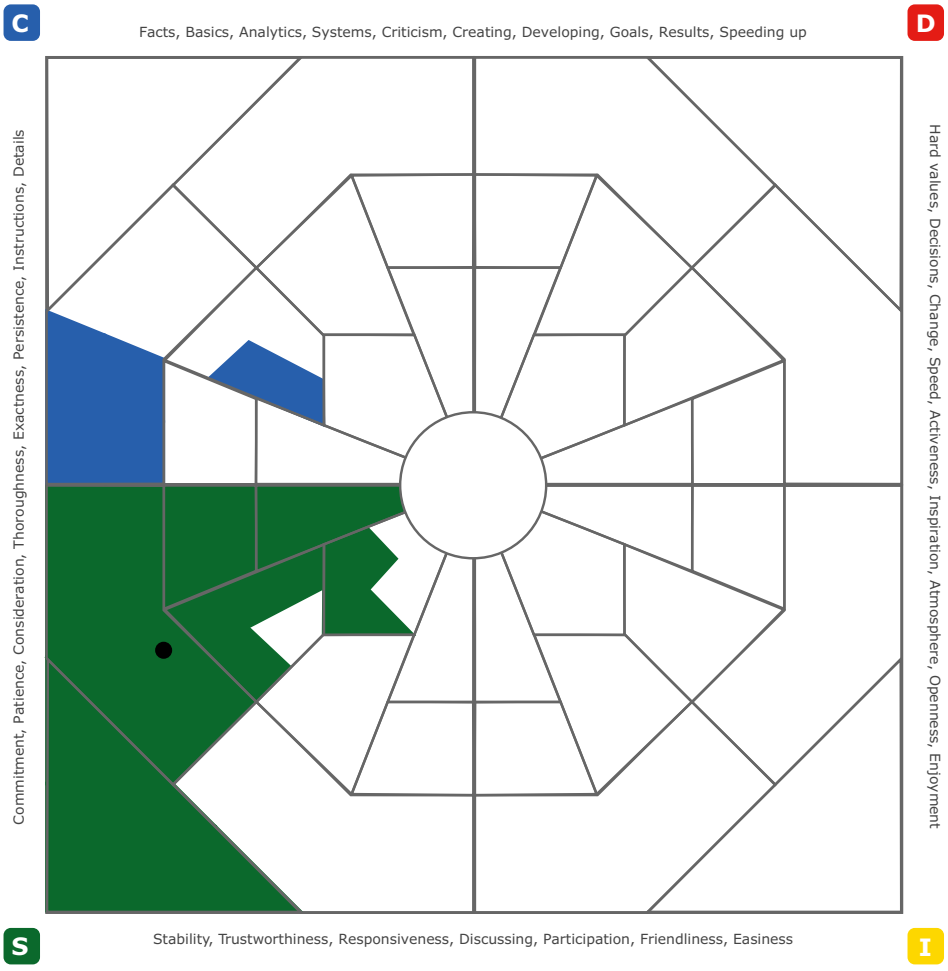

The DISC Model is divided into four quadrants: D, I, S and C.

The dot and rectangle identified in color shows the location of your natural style. Determine in what quadrant it is placed. This is your most natural and comfortable behavioral style (D, I, S or C). The shadings demonstrate the behavioral styles that are quite comfortable for you.

The tip of the arrow is pointing to where your Profile 1, Your Perceived Need to Adapt, is located on the Diamond.

The DISC quadrant(s) that have shading represent your DISC comfort areas or your natural style.

The DISC quadrant(s) that have no shading represent DISC styles requiring more energy from you.

Ethan at a Glance

This page is a description of how others are likely to perceive you. In other words, while the text describes your typical behavior as seen by others, you certainly can modify your behavior to fit the needs of a particular situation and/or individual(s). Also, you may have already addressed the development areas by learning new skills.

How Others May Perceive You:

Steady, considerate, undemanding, reliable, adjustable, careful, peaceful, quiet, practical, thoughtful, high-principled, exact, punctual, circumstantial.

How Others May Perceive Your Communication Style:

This person is a critical and determined conversationalist who does not open his mouth unless he is confident that his audience is interested in what he has to say. This is because he is not very inspiring, selling nor motivating and prefers to stick to the facts. He is kind and critical but not a very receptive listener.

How Others May Perceive Your Decision-making:

Although he may have firm opinions and principles, he is not very strong nor fast in making decisions. He wants time to consider things thoroughly in some cases and usually values old, familiar methods.

Ethan's Strengths:

- Doesn't begin before is absolutely sure
- Follows the agreed principles
- Can concentrate on his own work
- Does not make hasty decisions
- Informs in advance what is going to do
- Has the patience to wait for his turn
- Doesn't pay attention to himself
- Calm worker
- Achieves success through knowledge and reliability
- Knows and respects the traditions of the team
- Makes sure he is right
- Takes only his share; leaves others what they deserve

Your Motivators

You tend to like and feel comfortable with these items. Are you taking advantage of comfort areas?

Ethan likes to listen to other opinions and maintains distance to avoid any kind of attention. He likes to create routines that bring order and purpose to his life. He needs to be reassured that everybody will act as agreed even if surprises occur.

You are more likely to respond positively and feel energized if these factors are present in your work environment.

- Reliability and rationality
- Clear and thorough directions
- Criteria for decision making
- Appreciation as the persistent worker
- A chance to delve into his own work
- Continuity and respect for traditions
- Analyzing and deleting risk-factors
- Receiving support when starting new tasks
- Planned and considered advancement
- Lots of information to support decision making
- Enough time to delve into the problems
- A chance to plan in advance

Situations that Reduce Your Motivation

All of us face situations on a daily basis that we do not like much and tend to drain our energy levels. The items below are likely to decrease your motivation and require more energy from you.

- Behaving contrary to what was promised
- Uncertainty and insecurity
- Revealing his own opinion
- Being away from familiar circles
- Performing in the front of complete strangers
- Taking risks
- Insecurity
- Overlapping assignments
- Aggressive people
- A situation of constant change
- Chaos and conflicts
- People not appreciating his contributions

Carefully consider Situations that Reduce Your Motivation. Be aware of their impact on making your goals a reality. Are you prone to procrastinate with situations/tasks that correspond to items listed above?

Your Strengths

Strengths are items that tend to be easier, more natural and require less energy from you.

- Doesn't begin before is absolutely sure
- Follows the agreed principles
- Can concentrate on his own work
- Does not make hasty decisions
- Informs in advance what is going to do
- Has the patience to wait for his turn
- Doesn't pay attention to himself
- Calm worker
- Achieves success through knowledge and reliability
- Knows and respects the traditions of the team
- Makes sure he is right
- Takes only his share; leaves others what they deserve

Most of us tend to overlook our strengths, even taking them for granted. Do not let that happen to you. Instead, consider the items listed above and think how well you are taking advantage of these valuable behavioral traits. Please use caution however; remember that an overused strength very often becomes a weakness and a serious liability to our performance.

Reactions to Pressure Situations

These are NOT descriptions of your weaknesses or present behavior. They are items that you should be cautious about since these reactions in pressure situations may become more evident. Understanding how you react to pressure situations can make it easier to deal with them.

- Hesitates too long in decision-making situations
- Can be influenced by others when making decisions
- Has difficulty to form a final opinion
- Withdraws into his "shell"
- Could change but is afraid of giving up the old
- Turns into the safe solutions
- Believes in the precedents too much
- Reacts slowly and hesitantly
- Hesitates to take a stand
- Is not the "flagbearer" for the team
- Gives information but doesn't make decisions
- Double-checks - is never ready

Your Communication Style

We all have our own unique communication style. When we become aware of how we tend to communicate with others, it becomes easier to make conscious modifications to our style. These modifications improve our effectiveness with others.

Interpreting the bar graphs is simple:

The rectangles to the right side of the graph identify your preferred communication styles. Be conscious not to overuse them.

The rectangles to the left side of the graph identify communication styles that require more energy from you. You CAN communicate this way, but it may require more energy and concentration.

How Others View Your Communication Style

Your message and your communication style come across differently to different people. While you cannot control others, you can be more aware of your natural communication style and how it is perceived by others. Then you can make the necessary adjustments in your interactions with others.

This is how others may perceive your communication style.

This person is a critical and determined conversationalist who does not open his mouth unless he is confident that his audience is interested in what he has to say. This is because he is not very inspiring, selling nor motivating and prefers to stick to the facts. He is kind and critical but not a very receptive listener.

Identify an aspect of your communication style that is the most comfortable for you. What impact does it have in your current position? How can you capitalize on it more effectively?

Your Decision-Making Style

There is no best style for making decisions. However, we all have our own most comfortable way of decision-making. Successful people are aware of their preferred style and make conscious adjustments based on the requirements of each unique situation.

Interpreting the bar graphs is simple:

The rectangles to the right side of the graph identify your preferred decision-making styles. Be conscious not to overuse them.

The rectangles to the left side of the graph identify decision-making styles requiring more energy from you. You CAN make decisions this way as long as you concentrate more.

Your Role in a Team Setting

Frequently, we have to work with others to achieve common goals. Teamwork can be enjoyable, yet challenging. By becoming more aware of how we tend to behave in team settings - and how others perceive us - will improve our performance.

Your attitude to teamwork:

- An important means to delegate tasks correctly
- Getting everybody to take responsibility
- A way to make the right decisions

Your role within a team:

- Often adapts to the role of a performer
- To make sure that you proceed according to the plan
- Keeps to the back

How you motivate the team:

- Motivates by giving information
- Holds on to one's own responsibility
- Often forgets motivation

How you perform in the team:

- An extremely trustworthy doer
- Enters into one's matter carefully
- Stays on the same thing a bit too much

How you benefit the team:

- Things get done
- Recognizing possible errors
- Staying on schedule

Becoming a Better Team Member

Ethan, below are a few suggestions on how to improve your success in working within a team.

- Remember that only change is constant
- Try to set aside time to stop working and to start talking about it
- Practice taking a positive attitude toward new thoughts and ideas
- Try to get others to owe you a favor
- Think about what new you could do today
- Demand renewal from yourself
- Try to get others to really participate in doing things

Choose one of the above suggestions that is the most relevant in your life. How could you modify your behavior to make you even more successful?

How to Identify Others' Styles

Now that you have identified your own style, the next step is to identify the styles of others so that you may then make the most effective adjustments to yours. This is a skill that takes practice, but is easy to learn.

As you become more familiar with the DISC-styles, you will find some people are easy to identify. You will quickly think to yourself: "She is a D-style" or "He is an S-style." These individuals are predominantly one style and can be identified easily.

The rest of the people you encounter will take a little more effort. However, it is a simple, three-step process of identifying other's style:

Step 1. Observe
Step 2. Assess
Step 3. Recognize

Step 1: Observe

When you meet someone, pay attention to traits such as:

- what the person talks about
- how he/she says it – type of words (e.g. "I" vs. "We"), type of questions (e.g. "what?", "why?")
- body language
- tonality

You will discover that observing behaviors will become second nature. Soon you will observe behaviors without thinking.

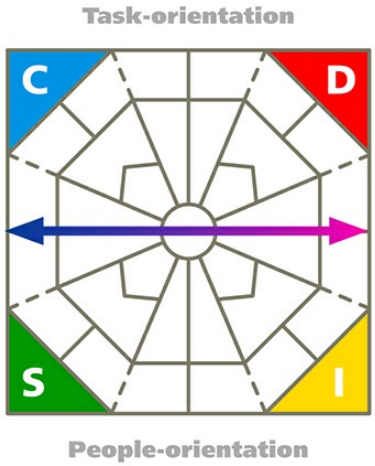

This assessment is prepared by Extended DISC and protected by Copyright. www.ExtendedDISC.org
1.800.257.7481

Step 2: Assess

Based on your observations, determine if the individual is more:

- Active
- Reserved

Reserved

Reserved Individuals (S and C-styles):

Talk about present and past and how things are now

Speak with a calm and fairly quiet voice

Tend to have hesitant eye-contact

If the person is Reserved, they are either S-style or C-style.

If the person is Active, they are either D-style or I-style.

Active

Active Individuals (D and I-styles):

Talk about future and how things could be

Speak with a fairly loud voice and inflection

Demonstrate body language that is animated and assertive

Maintain strong eye-contact

If the individual is Active, he/she is either D-style or I-style.

- Talks about future and how things could be
- Speaks with a fairly loud voice and inflection
- Demonstrates body language that is animated and assertive
- Maintains strong eye-contact

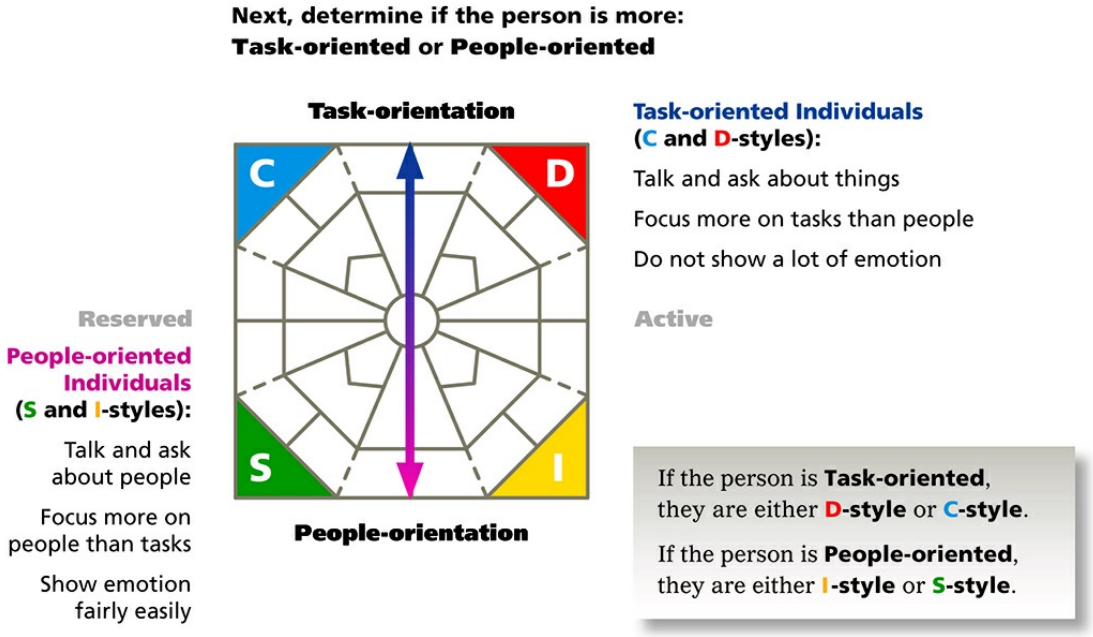

If the individual is Reserved, he/she is either S-style or C-style.

- Talks about present and past and how things are now
- Speaks with a calm and fairly quiet voice
- Demonstrates body language that is limited
- Tends to have hesitant eye-contact

This assessment is prepared by Extended DISC and protected by Copyright. www.ExtendedDISC.org
1.800.257.7481

Next, determine if the individual is more:

- Task-oriented
- People-oriented

If the individual is Task-oriented, he/she is either D-style or C-style.

- Talks and asks about things
- Focuses more on tasks than people
- Does not show a lot of emotion

If the individual is People-oriented, he/she is either I-style or S-style.

- Talks and asks about people
- Focuses more on people than tasks
- Shows emotion fairly easily

This assessment is prepared by Extended DISC and

1.800.257.7481

Step 3: Recognize

Now you have the information needed to identify the person's style by combining the Active-Reserved and Task-People Orientation.

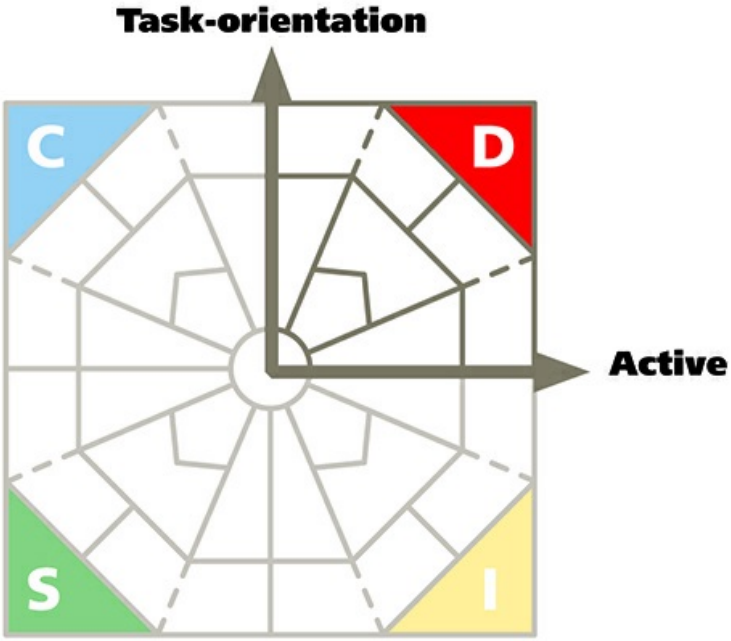

D-style = Active and Task-oriented

This is how to recognize D-styles.

Talks about: Goals, oneself, hard values ($, revenue, profits) results, change.

How to identify D-styles:

- Is decisive
- Is assertive
- Very impatient
- May interrupt you
- Is direct, says what thinks
- "What's the bottom line?"
- Focuses on the big picture
- States own opinions as facts
- "How does this benefit ME?"
- Often appears to be in a hurry
- Makes decisions quickly, almost hastily
- May talk to many people at the same time
- May have difficulty understanding others' viewpoints/feelings

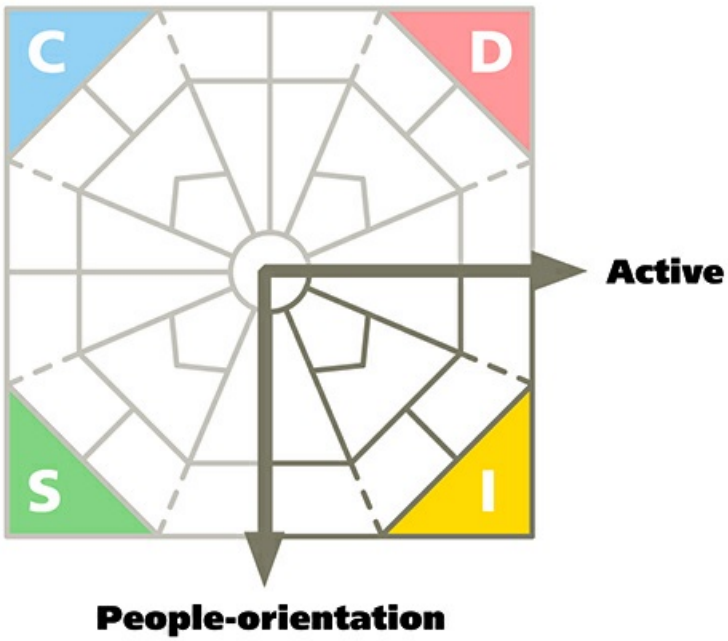

I-style = Active and People-oriented

This is how to recognize I-styles.

Talks about: People, team-spirit, good things, future, oneself

How to identify I-styles:

- Talks a lot
- Is animated
- Is open and friendly
- Appears unorganized
- Does not listen for long
- Stays away from hard facts
- Does not pay close attention
- Jumps from subject to subject
- Does not focus much on details

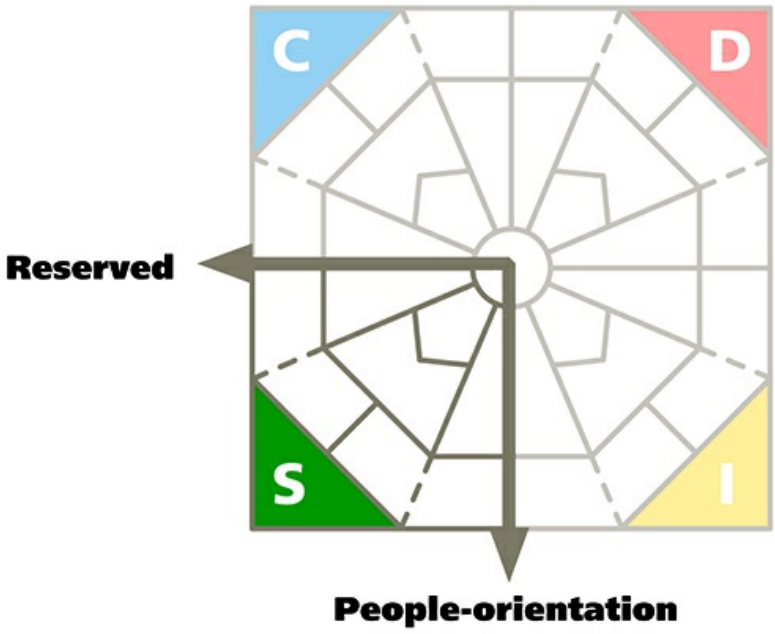

S-style = Reserved and People-oriented

This is how to recognize S-styles.

Talks about: Agreements, principles, past, proofs, one's team

How to identify S-styles:

- Is easy-going
- Appears calm
- Listens carefully
- Appears thoughtful
- Nods and goes along
- "Let me think about it"
- Likes own physical space
- Does not get easily excited
- Ponders alternatives, slow in making decisions
- Asks questions and inquires about the specifics
- Seems have strong opinions but does not express them vocally
- Completely new ideas/things seem to make him/her uncomfortable

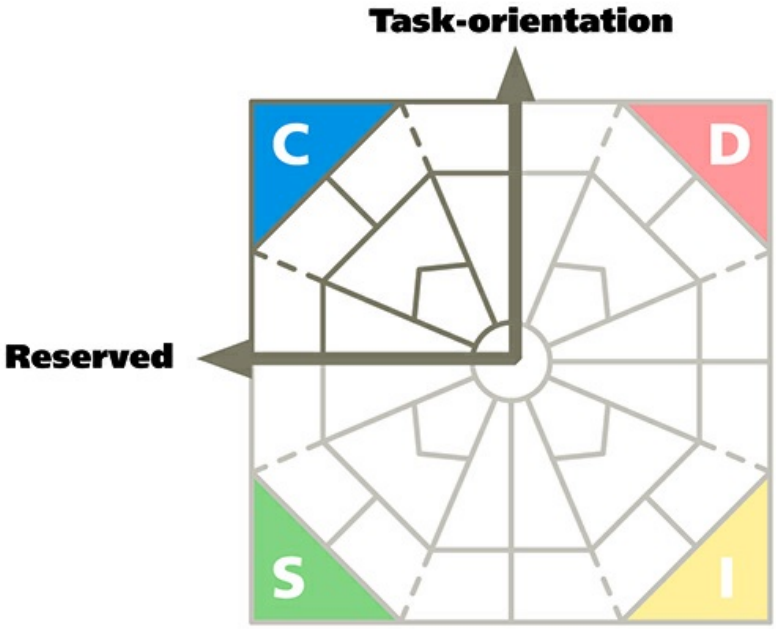

C-style = Reserved and Task-oriented

This is how to recognize C-styles.

Talks about: Facts, analyses, details, rules, instructions

How to identify C-styles:

- Is quiet
- Focuses on details
- Proceeds cautiously
- Asks many questions
- Appears reserved and somewhat timid
- Doesn't easily express disagreeing views
- May have done homework on your products/services
- Studies specifications and other information carefully
- Makes decision only after studying pertinent facts/issues
- May be very critical; criticism based on facts, not opinions

D-styles

"Winning takes precedence over all. There's no gray area. No almosts."

- Kobe Bryant

The D-style is the most aggressive and assertive of the four styles. D-styles tend to be quite competitive and results-oriented. As a result, you may identify D-styles as being quite aggressive, blunt and even rude. Under pressure they can appear to have a lack of concern for others. They do not want to lose control. D-styles want to be in charge and have the power.

D-styles prefer to move fast, take risks and get things done now. They like change and challenges. D-styles may also often want to create change.

D-styles can also be impatient and overbearing. They are often not very good listeners and are prone to make snap decisions.

Motto: I did it my way.

Focus: Actively controls tasks and things.

Under pressure – Lack of concern. This refers to D-styles' tendency to overlook how their actions and behaviors affect others.

Fear – Loss of control. This refers to D-styles' desire to be in charge. They do not want to give up control.

Favorite question: What? (What is the bottom line? What is in it for me?)

Communication Style:

- Often to only one direction – he/she talks and expects others to listen
- Expresses own opinions as facts that need no further discussion
- May be blunt and challenges others
- Interrupts others often

How to Adjust Your Communication Style to Achieve Your Goals with D-styles

Ethan, when communicating with a D-style, remember to:

- Try to show them all of the new and exceptional things that you can offer
- Encourage them into positive consideration of all of the possibilities the product/service creates
- Create an image that you are a strong and reliable person
- Emphasize the benefits they can realize
- Always state first what the key message is
- Be aware of how much detail they want
- Be flexible to their ideas

Ethan, what not to do with D-style:

- Do not get stuck on one topic for too long
- Do not be a bore
- Avoid being too stiff and inflexible
- Do not overload them with details
- Do not try to prove everything wrong what they say
- Do not go into too much detail too soon
- Do not show uncertainty - show honesty

I-Styles

"Why fit in when you were born to stand out?"

- Dr. Seuss

I-styles are outgoing, social, and talkative, and like to be the center of attention. They like to interact with others and meet new people. They do not like to focus on details, or spend a lot of time by themselves. Others tend to perceive I-styles as very friendly, enthusiastic and animated.

I-styles are the influencing and interactive individuals who shake up their environment by bringing others into alliance with one another. They know what they want, align everyone together to get it done, and want everyone to like them as they move forward. Social acceptance is very important for I-styles – they like to be liked.

I-styles are talkative, sociable, optimistic and lively. They are people-oriented, spontaneous, energetic and enthusiastic. I-styles tend to be positive and good at influencing others.

I-styles can also be inattentive to details, overly talkative and emotional. They may over-promise because they are so optimistic and eager to be popular. Others may perceive I-styles as somewhat careless, impulsive and lacking follow-up.

Motto: "I am a nice person. Everyone should like me."

Focus: Actively involved with people and emotions.

Under pressure – Disorganized. I-styles have a tendency to focus so much on people that they may overlook details and tasks.

Fear – Social rejection. I-styles have a strong desire to be liked by others.

Favorite question: Who? (Who is going to be at the meeting? Who else is using this?)

Communication Style:

- Selling and inspiring
- Talks a lot, but not about details
- Avoids unpleasant subjects
- Good at providing positive, constructive feedback
- Not always direct

How to Adjust Your Communication Style to Achieve Your Goals with I-styles

Ethan, when communicating with an I-style, remember to:

- Emphasize the aspects that make you reliable
- Accept the sudden changes in discussion topics - but lead them carefully back to the actual topic
- Encourage them to consider what they could achieve with your product/service
- Be active
- Encourage them to talk
- Actively communicate and show your enthusiasm
- Be prepared to talk a lot

Ethan, what not to do with an I-style:

- Do not be boring
- Do not be inflexible if you can close the sale by adjusting to their requirements
- Do not always provide your service the same way
- Do not assume a passive role
- Try not to be boring
- Do not be too strict with them - show you can be flexible
- Do not disagree with them unnecessarily

S-Styles

"None of us, including me, ever do great things. But we can all do small things, with great love, and together we can do something wonderful."

- Mother Teresa

S-styles are steady, calm and laid back. While they do like interaction with other people, they are more reserved and less animated than I-styles. S-styles prefer things to remain the same because changes and surprises threaten their sense of security. Family and friends tend to be very important to S-styles. They often defend their own group or team almost emotionally; fairness and justice are very important to S-styles.

S-styles are reliable and stable with an emphasis on cooperating with whoever is in charge to carry out the tasks. They say: "Tell me what, when and how you want it done and I'll be glad to do it." If you do not give me enough details, I won't get started because you might blame me if it gets done wrong."

Since S-styles prefer stability and security, they tend to resist change and need support with it. They want to know how the change will affect their lives. S-styles are also prone to be hesitant in their actions and decision-making. This is primarily caused by their desire to consider others and for everyone to get along.

Motto: If it's not broken, let's not fix it.

Focus: Involved with familiar people.

Under pressure – Too willing. S-styles' have a tendency to be accommodating and polite. Often they say "yes" too easily.

Fear – Loss of stability. S-styles have a desire to have a stable and secure environment. Change can be challenging for S-styles.

Favorite Question: How? (How are we going to do this? How does this impact us?)

Communication Style:

- Often only to one direction, he/she listens
- Answers when asked
- Talks calmly
- Creates trust
- Talks about topics he/she masters
- Better in one-to-one situations
- Good instructor

How to Adjust Your Communication Style to Achieve Your Goals with S-styles

Ethan, when communicating with an S-style, remember to:

- Be aware of information and details that can be covered later
- Do not start arguing about opinions
- Listen and understand; then try to solve the challenge
- Always agree on the next two or three steps before moving forward
- Agree with them when it is time to take the next step
- Talk about how things will work but do not go into too much detail
- Speed up when they will not do it

Ethan, what not to do with an S-style:

- Do not bring up anything they would consider additional risks; requiring further analysis
- Do not overanalyze; simplify
- Do not feel that you have to hide something or cannot tell everything
- Do not allow them to make a decision before you know it is the one you want
- Do not hesitate to state your opinion
- Do not wait until they make a decision
- Do not be too official

C-Styles

"I have no special talent. I am only passionately curious."

- Albert Einstein

C-styles are the most analytical of the four behavioral styles. C-styles can be very detail-oriented, focusing on facts, information and proofs. They are comfortable working alone and are the most reserved of the four styles. C-styles are logical and methodical in their approach.

C-styles are cautious and compliant to their own high standards. Their emphasis is to work with the existing circumstances to ensure the quality of the product or service. C-styles make sure that everything works the way it should.

C-styles are sometimes too critical of others. They expect everyone to follow their standards. Their attention to detail and correctness can be perceived as nit-picky by others. C-styles' desire to do things correctly can also slow down their decision-making. They can over-analyze issues and need a lot of information.

Motto: "If we do not have time to do it right, do we have time to do it over again?" As a result, C-styles are good in ensuring quality control.

Focus: Analyzes tasks and things.

Under pressure – Overly critical. C-styles have a tendency to be so focused on the details that they often find mistakes and errors. The other styles may find C-styles too critical.

Fear – Criticism of work. C-styles want to be correct and to produce high-quality work. They do not want to make mistakes.

Favorite question: Why? (Why does is work this way? Why should we do it?)

How to Adjust Your Communication Style to Achieve Your Goals with C-styles

Ethan, when communicating with a C-style, remember to:

- Feed them with ideas and possibilities
- Be careful not to go into unnecessary details with them
- Tell them something they already know and make them believe they know the rest as well
- Always paint the big picture before going into the details
- Do not let them waver too much after a decision is made
- When you go into details, remember not to get bogged down in them
- Make yourself their friend

Ethan, what not to do with a C-style:

- If you have never done this before, do not let them know it
- Do not confuse them with too many choices
- Avoid any bureaucracy that would just delay the process
- Do not let them control what will happen next
- Do not cover all their questions thoroughly; only the ones that are actually relevant
- Do not bring up details that do not support you achieving your goals
- Avoid formal negotiation settings that would put them in the spotlight
